

January 26, 2023

Good morning! It's Irene Qiu from 731 and I'm here this Thoughtful Thursday on behalf of the S.E.A.L Team.

Every year on the fourth Thursday in January, we observe National Clashing Clothes Day. People are urged to wear completely discordant outfits on this day. White, black, or gray are all considered neutral colors today, so steer clear of those! Simply put, this is a day to have fun with your attire and wear the brightest, silliest of colors to school without the fashion police ruining your day.

Keep that attitude in mind for tomorrow, when we will be wearing our wardrobe's brightest items. It's "Neon Day" tomorrow. Wear your neon so that everyone can see how your appearance and attitude may make someone's day brighter. So, keep in mind to "Shine bright like a neon sign" now and tomorrow.

Thanks for listening have a Tacky Thursday 😊
